Seaweed

Sea Weed

PT PPI actively participates in advancing Indonesia's leading maritime commodities into the global market. We are proud to export three types of seaweed that are highly sought after and have a high international economic value.

The richness of Indonesia's tropical waters enables the cultivation of high-quality seaweed, making it an essential raw material for various industries, ranging from food to cosmetics.

Eucheuma Cottonii Seaweed

Main source of Kappa Carrageenan. Cultivated in the tidal and upper subtidal zones of reefs with slow-to-moderate water movement.

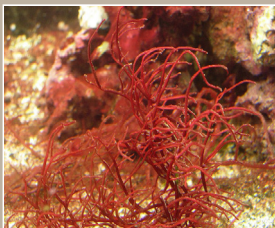

- Packaging: 100 Kg/Bale
- Impurities: 3%
- Moisture: 35%–37%

Eucheuma Spinosum

Processed into Iota Carrageenan. Grows in the tidal zone, often found on muddy, sandy seabeds, or on dead corals.

- Packaging: 100 Kg/Bale
- Impurities: 3%
- Moisture: 35%–37%

Gracilaria Sp

An agarophytic seaweed type that produces agar. It is a red algae, living in tropical and subtropical waters and dominant in shallow marine waters.

- Packaging: 100 Kg/Bale
- Protein: 0,04%
- Moisture: 18,7%
- Fiber: 0,2%

Gum Damar

Gum Damar

PT Perusahaan Perdagangan Indonesia is enriching its export portfolio with Gum Damar, a high-quality natural resin sourced from Indonesia's rich tropical forests. Gum Damar is highly sought after in the international market due to its wide application in the paint, varnish, printing ink, and cosmetics industries.

We are proud to export Gum Damar in various grades to meet the specific needs of global customers. Our two main export-leading grades are Gum Damar CDX and Gum Damar ABX.

A detailed photograph of various spices arranged on a wooden surface. In the foreground, there are several small wooden bowls containing ground spices: a bright red powder, a vibrant yellow powder, a bright green powder, and a golden-brown powder. Scattered around these bowls are cinnamon sticks, star anise pods, and dried red chili peppers. A bowl of dark, whole peppercorns is also visible. The background is softly blurred, showing more spice containers and a window with natural light. The word "Spices" is overlaid in white text at the bottom center.

Spices

Spices Category

PT Perusahaan Perdagangan Indonesia proudly presents Indonesia's premium spices to the global market. As a nation historically known as the 'Spice Islands,' the archipelago's natural wealth yields commodities with the best aroma and quality, making them key ingredients in global cuisine, health, and industries.

We guarantee the quality of the spices we export, from harvesting to packaging. Seven main spice commodities are ready to meet international demand: Cloves, White Pepper, Black Pepper, Star Anise, Cinnamon, Nutmeg, Mace.
